When a believer in the only true Creator-God and follower of Y'shua, His Son, start walking the Torah road, we start looking for ways to increase our knowledge of God to be able to serve Him better. The course that most people follow is to study the weekly parshot (Torah portions) as observant Jews have been doing for many years. While Torah was certainly neglected by the main-stream churches, it would do us no good to now only study Torah and neglect the rest of Scriptures! This reading plan therefore follows the proper Torah reading cycle, where each week is broken up into seven aliyot (plural of aliyah, coming up) and the Haftarah (parting, taking leave) after the final aliyah on Shabbat. However, the rest of the Scriptures are never touched and it is for this reason that this reading plan uses everyday, except Shabbat, to read the rest of Scriptures. Even the Apostolic Scriptures (traditionally and erroneously known as the "new testament") selected for Shabbat tie in with the Torah portion. There are a few exceptions when other texts are selected, as explained below.

Some readers may realise that the books are not in the same order as those of the King James, since the order used here is the original as per the Hebrew, before Jerome changed the order with the production of his Latin Vulgate Bible. More information can be seen on <http://www.cogwriter.com/original-bible-order.htm>

All italicised text are readings specifically for festivals:

Pesach is from sunset 10 April until sunset 26 April

Shavuot is from sunset 8 June until sunset 9 June

Yom T'ruah is from sunset 29 September until sunset 1 October

Yom Kippur is from sunset 8 October until sunset 9 October

Sucot is from sunset 13 October until sunset 21 October

Simchat Torah is from sunset 21 October until sunset 22 October

While Purim is not a commanded (Biblical) festival, it is customary to read the book of Esther during this time. For this reason only the book of Ezekiel was interrupted to read Esther on the days that Purim is celebrated. It is not obligatory for non-Jews to celebrate Purim or Chanukah, the festival of lights which takes place in the Hebrew month of Kislev (November or December). However, should you wish to celebrate these, please study the origins and customs carefully to ensure you don't trade one pagan tradition (christmas et al) for another pagan tradition (non-Biblical Jewish festivals).

While every effort has been made to ensure the correctness of the texts on these pages, it is possible that some errors may have crept in. Please notify me of any you may encounter and I will correct them for the next issue.

May every person using this reading plan be blessed by the richness and joy of the Word of God and learn to follow more closely in the footsteps of our Messiah, Y'shua.
